A woman with long brown hair, Molly Brandt, is smiling and holding a glass of red wine. She is wearing a white dress with green and red horizontal stripes. She is sitting at a bar with various bottles and glasses on the counter. The background is a dark teal wall with a shelf holding more glasses and a pineapple. The lighting is warm and focused on her.

Abstract

Abstract: There is a new chapter in the story of biology for non-human organisms. In the 1980s, there were genes, but not genomes; now, genomes are sequenced and compared. In the 1990s, there were proteins, but not proteomes; now, proteomes are sequenced and compared. In the 2000s, there are cells, but not cellomes; now, cellomes are sequenced and compared. In the 2010s, there are organisms, but not organismomes; now, organismomes are sequenced and compared. This is a new chapter in the story of biology for non-human organisms. Abstract

Abstract: There is a need to improve the ability of pathologists to best manage patients with CNS tumours. There are gaps in knowledge. This, in conjunction with the increase in the number of patients with CNS tumours, has led to a need for a more structured approach to the management of these patients. This is a review of the current management of these patients. The aim is to provide a guide to the management of these patients.
